Tuning Up For Hunting Season

I've been training for the Invitational, along with getting several dogs ready for a UT test. You can feel it in the air that the hunting season is just around the corner. Doing all of this training during the summertime preparing for testing makes our dogs tuned up for the hunting season. Guiding clients during the hunting season is a little change for me—I'm always starting the days off early and working late. It's nice talking with my clients about dogs and hunting, with them having the same passion I have for the outdoors. Training is always the big question, and that's when I mention NAVHDA training days and testing, and encourage them to join our group.

Over the next few months of the VHD magazine you will be seeing ads about our 2018 Annual Meeting on January 18-21. Dan Wittman and his crew are planning a great event—it will be in held in Las Vegas this year! We are hoping for a strong turn-out. Following the annual meeting, the S.H.O.T. Show (Shooting, Hunting, Outdoor Trade Show) starts January 23rd and goes through January 26th—good reason to stay longer and enjoy the show!

fostering our Outdoor Heritage

By Shae Birkey
Washington, Illinois

NAVHDA continues to amaze me in so many ways over the years—all for the good of our dogs and the good of our conservation heritage. Whether it's the way that the organization opens its arms to people from all backgrounds and to dogs of so many different breed backgrounds, or the fairly recently added youth programs.

Many states and organizations are focusing on youth hunting these days in order to recruit hunters to fill the void left by those who pass on and/or stop hunting. According to statistics, the number of new hunters are not keeping pace with the number who are no longer. Given hunting's close ties to conservation dollars, this is a potentially disastrous scenario playing out.

There are three separately applied for NAVHDA youth programs: the Kristen Rieser Scholarship, Youth Testing Incentive Program, and Youth Events Program.

The goal of each of these is to remove barriers keeping youth from experiencing the outdoors, particularly hunting. This, in turn, will foster a lifelong love of the outdoor heritage and lifestyle as well as the values that NAVHDA represents.

The NAVHDA Youth Development Committee was created in order to support, promote, and manage all NAVHDA youth programs, with a focus on getting more youth involved with NAVHDA, hunting, and to ultimately be the next leaders in the outdoor field. Multiple Regional representatives on the committee provide direct support for NAVHDA chapters by answering questions, providing support, and guiding them through the process associated with applying for any of the youth programs NAVHDA offers. The committee also reviews and approves the various received youth events applications to ensure they meet the requirements of each of the programs that are offered, and manages NAVHDA's youth budget. NAVHDA youth programs are financially supported directly from NAVHDA funds, donations from NAVHDA members and chapters, and the Piper Jaffray Endowment fund.

If you are interested in applying for one of these opportunities, it is very important to understand the requirements, follow the process, and provide the appropriate requested information. Be especially thoughtful to the specifics regarding how the money will be spent.

Additional information and the application for each of the three youth opportunities can be found on the NAVHDA website under "Youth Programs."

Since being a part of the Youth Development Committee, I've been astounded to learn the number and types of first-class events being put on by chapters around North America. It once again reinforces my love of the organization and makes me proud to be an active member.

NAVHDA's Youth Programs

- The Kristen Rieser Scholarship endowment funds the cost of young members (18 years and under) who wish to attend a NAVHDA Handlers Clinic.
- The Youth Testing Incentive Program encourages youth education and participation in the training and testing of versatile hunting dogs.
- The Youth Events Program's (most popular and applied for by far) purpose is to financially support the efforts of NAVHDA members, chapters, the Youth Development Committee or Executive Council in developing the next generation of dog enthusiasts, outdoors persons, and hunters.

Youth Programs Funded in 2016

- Kristen Riser Scholarship Fund
  Two youths participated in the scholarship.

- Youth Testing Incentive Program
  20 youths participated with over $2,200 in reimbursed test entry fees.

- Youth Events Programs
  Nine individual chapters hosted youth events with over $8,500 in financial support from NAVHDA.

In 2017, the youth programs involvement and participation is expected to increase and grow. As of August 2017, the number of youth programs applications have already surpassed the total number applied for in 2016.

Game Birds & Gun Dogs

A 4-H Youth Event

By Daniel Kremmers
Fulton, New York

For many, the words 'New York' conjure up images of the Statue of Liberty, city streets with skyscrapers, and gun grabbing politicians. However, there is a small section of New York, comprising roughly 95% of its land mass, where a distinctly different way of life exists, with farms aplenty and ample public land on which to either cast a line, or a bird dog. We call this Upstate New York.

On April 22, 2017, from all corners of this geographically diverse state came youths who are actively involved in 4-H activities. Some of these kids, and their parents, had driven nearly five hours to come to the New York State Fairgrounds in Syracuse, New York to partake in various activities. One of these activities was a program titled "Game Birds and Gun Dogs" and it was being hosted by the Ruffed Grouse Society's Northeast Regional Biologist, and fellow NAVHDA member, Andy Weik.

Andy explained that his program was scheduled for an hour-and-a-half, with two separate groups of youngsters. The first half of the program would be dedicated to Andy giving the kids a lecture on the various game birds in the United States, along with hands-on examinations of wings, tails, and whole birds of both ruffed grouse and American woodcock. Andy did a great job keeping the kids interested during his presentation by mixing in photographs of the various game birds and landscapes from across North America, with pictures and videos of people engaged in hunting. In particular, he has a slow motion video of a grouse flushing, seemingly out of no where, in front of a staunch point from an English setter. The bird, captured in great detail, managed to fly right through an opening and remained in view for several seconds. This video will, hopefully, remain fresh in these bright-eyed youngster's minds; and if they spend the next thirty years dedicated to the art of pursuing grouse with a pointing dog, perhaps they too may, one day, find a bird which holds so well and which flies with such recklessness. I, for one, have yet to encounter that bird!

After wrapping up the "classroom" session, the children really got excited. Andy had promised them that they would get to meet, watch, and actually handle, some "expert" bird dogs. Given Andy's position with the Ruffed Grouse Society, and the number of bird hunters and dogs he knows, it is a real testament to NAVHDA's reputation that he would seek out NAVHDA handlers to demonstrate to the kids what a finished bird dog looks like.

I had asked fellow Southern Tier of New York NAVHDA member, Jeff Bordwell, to assist on this project. Jeff is a professional archer who has ample experience working with outdoor-minded kids through various archery seminars he runs at his shop, Legends of the Fall. Jeff had brought his three-time Utility Prize I shorthair, Maggie, and I brought my own Utility Prize I Pudelpointer, Ozzy. As neither of these two dogs had done any formal training in several months, Andy's faith in our dogs was significantly higher than our own!

As he wrapped up his classroom session, Andy asked the students if they were ready to work some dogs. The enthusiasm on the part of the kids was a bit infectious—I couldn't blame them. Aside from the kids competing on horseback, working bird dogs had all of the other activities beat by a long shot! The walk to the mowed grass area, where we would work the dogs, gave us a chance to speak to the kids for the first time. A few of the kids volunteered that they had a hunting license, while others stated that their family members did, and they would when they got older. “Does anybody have a hunting dog?” “I have a bluetick...” “I have a redbone...” “I have a blue heeler...” I have no doubt that heeler could hunt too.

We allowed the kids to handle the dogs in a circuit, with planted birds. As we were working in a mowed section of grass, placement of the birds seemed problematic, however, Andy had foreseen this predicament and had brought enough hay to cover not only our kick cages, but also set up several dummy locations where no bird was to be found.

Each kid was able to handle the dog into a point, and then to produce a bird. Another kid would then throw a frozen duck and send the dogs for retrieve. Each kid had a chance to either work the dog into a bird, or to handle the dog on a retrieve. For a final treat, the kids were allowed to watch Andy’s Irish setter work birds and wirehair make retrieves. All told, the kids got to work with four breeds of dogs, in multiple events.

If anybody is looking to stroke their ego, I suggest volunteering for one of these events. As a final demonstration with one of the groups, I placed a live, harnessed pigeon on Ozzy’s back, while he was at Whoa. “That is the best dog I have ever seen!” “Amazing!” “That dog is even better!” By the end of it, I couldn’t help like feeling like ‘old Pa’tridge Bill’ in Burton Spiller’s classic story “Red Letter Day.” If they only knew how close Ozzy was to blowing off the birds completely and blowing up the 4H Ultimate Frisbee match going on in the parking lot next to us!

Going into this event, I was afraid that we simply would not have enough material to keep the kids entertained for 45 minutes. It turned out that both sessions ended with both the kids and the adults wanting to continue. I would heartily recommend that if any NAVHDA member gets a chance to partake in any such youth event, you jump on the chance.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK

Addressing Flagging

By Mark Whalen
Poolesville, Maryland

In a previous article I explored flagging and whether it's created or inherent. This article will focus on how it may have been created, some possible avenues to address the problem, and, more importantly, how to avoid it altogether. I think it's prudent to review what our Aims, Programs, Test Rules book states regarding pointing: "The pointing stance must be intense, convincing, and unmistakable as a point and, in the end, the point must be productive."

Will your dog be penalized for flagging in a NAVHDA test? It really depends on how bad the flagging is. If the dog is very intense and flags slightly, then it probably will not be penalized. If the dog is flagging so much the back of the dog is moving around, then, yes, it absolutely will be penalized. That would be another example of why we score from 0 to 4 in every aspect of testing—it all depends on the severity and will be scored appropriately.

To fix any problem, the problem must first be diagnosed. This may take a bit of self-identification and soul searching to really try and understand what created the flagging issue. For some people this is a difficult task, and one must take a very good look at their training practices. Someone, who was probably famous, once said, "Repeating the same behavior, and hoping for a different outcome, is the definition of insanity." The same goes true for dog training. If you are not getting a desired outcome, and repeating the same behavior, it might be time to change your approach to training. All dogs are different and require different approaches. Give them what they need, and don't give them what they don't need. If your dog is exhibiting unwanted behavior of any kind, it's because you are allowing that behavior to happen. I know this seems elementary, but in fact it is. Unwanted behavior needs to be corrected; positive behavior needs to be rewarded in the form of praise—lavish praise. Dogs live in a very black and white world, so keep it very black and white for them. Uncertainty from you and your training methods create grey areas in dogs; it really muddies the water for them, and manifests confusion and a lack of confidence in the dog. A confused dog makes mistakes, and dogs that have not fully been taught the expectation, and are disciplined for mistakes, further adds to the confusion and also creates a lack of confidence.

In my opinion, flagging is created mostly by poor bird management. Some people will say their dog flags because they have given them too many pen-raised birds. I don't really think it's the amount of pen-raised birds used, I think it's the way the birds are being used. Some flaggers that I've seen are doing so out of boredom—same old thing in the same old field…point, kick, shoot, retrieve…point, kick, shoot, retrieve, etc. The dog is completely bored and his intelligence has been insulted—there is nothing in it for him. Other dog's flag because they have been allowed to cat-walk and creep on their birds. These dogs will often tighten if they can see the bird, or are allowed to get very close in the scent cone. Other dogs flag because of poor check-cord use; constantly tugging and checking the dog into birds may create dancing and flagging. Still others will flag in anticipation of the retrieve, because they have been allowed to get every retrieve in the field, and most likely have been allowed to get away with poor steadiness.

People will say things like, "My dog never flagged as a puppy, but now flags on every bird." ...poor bird management. I can't tell you how many people I've seen show up every Saturday with two or three birds. They will do the same thing and expect a different outcome. These same people will allow the dog to creep on point, take steps or break on steadiness, and allow the retrieve, while all the time yelling at their dog to whoa. They have created confusion and a lack of confidence in the dog, sometimes resulting in myriad issues, including flagging. I would rather see those same people show up once a month with a dozen birds and teach the dog something. Some dogs will flag only when they are aware of the presence of the handler. In our rules, pointing ends when the dog is aware of the presence of the handler, but this is still something I would want to fix. Sometimes issues left unaddressed become bigger issues.

Let's explore some possible fixes. It should be noted that there are many reasons why dogs flag, so a handler may have to try many different ways to fix that problem. Again, take a hard look at your training and try very hard to diagnose the issue before trying 10 different things, which may backfire and create further confusion and a lack of confidence in the dog. One thing is a sure cure for flagging: wild birds and lots of them. I can't remember, if ever, that I've seen a flagger exhibit the same behavior on wild birds. The beauty of lots of wild birds is that they tend to fix a lot of dog problems, including flagging, cat walking and creeping, to name a few. Never allow dogs to creep on point, once the point is established any forward movement from the dog should result in the bird being released with no shot and no retrieve. This may take a lot of birds…don't be cheap on your birds—you can't train a bird dog without lots of birds. Separate your training, meaning please don't try to fix flagging, steadiness and retrieving all at the same time in the field with three birds. Fix the bigger issue first and build confidence, then move on to correct other issues.

I always try to keep my personal involvement in the presence of game to a very minimal level. I want the birds to dictate what happens to the dog, or at least I want them to think that. When my dog is on point I generally say nothing, if I say anything at all I may say "good boy" in a very soft tone. Some people, as soon as their dog goes on point, will start whoaing the dog immediately and repeatedly, because they are so afraid the dog will break. Let the dog break and make your correction. These same people, after screaming whoa repeatedly, letting the dog take steps or break, and letting the dog leave early before being released, will, 100% of the time, let that dog have the retrieve. They have, in essence, given them the green light to be disobedient, creating confusion and a lack of confidence. Sometimes this results in flagging. If your dog only flags when he is aware of your presence, then try popping birds prior to you getting to the dog. Set up multiple traps, and pop multiple birds. If your dog flags all the time you may want to try and throw a few birds as you're walking up to the dog, maybe fire a shot or two, maybe kill more than one bird...build their intensity, so they never know how many birds are there and what is going to happen. I personally will rarely give my dog every retrieve in a field run, even if they are perfect on every bird. I never want them to anticipate when they will be sent for the retrieve. I will walk out, pick up the bird, put it in my bag, say nothing and move on. I also never release my dog remotely; I always, always, go back to the dog and pause for varying amounts of time before I release the dog. This may fix the flagger who is anticipating the retrieve.

The best advice I can give you is to keep your training fresh and different. Dogs get bored with the same old same old, which often will result in unwanted behavior, like flagging. Think about what you're doing and develop a game plan. Find people in your chapter or training group who are more experienced than you and stick with them. Demand excellence and reward good behavior with lavish praise. Make your corrections immediately and get on with it. Try very hard not to nag and insult their intelligence. Remember….keep it simple, black and white, and avoid grey areas. Dogs are pack animals, not people—each dog will learn at a different pace.

Good luck and good hunting.

NA WATER INTRO
a beginner's guide

Article & Photos By Kevin Billy
San Clemente, California

For those that own a puppy and plan to test their puppy in an upcoming NAVHDA Natural Ability test this fall, the time is now to start preparing for the three disciplines: water, field and tracking. As the name implies, NAVHDA dogs should be versatile; they must demonstrate a willingness to perform under a variety of circumstances. Though most puppies take to field work without a hitch, and most enjoy using their nose to locate hidden items, some have a reluctance to engage in water-work. Since NAVHDA testing puts a high priority on water drills, fulfilling this requirement not only builds a testable dog, but brings a bi-product of confidence and commitment from both owner and dog. But, as testing looms, how does one introduce a puppy to water, encourage it to swim, and prepare for this aspect of the test to create a reliable, versatile dog?

To start, it is necessary to begin the introduction on a warm day. Cold weather and cold water may only dampen a puppy's enthusiasm to engage. Exposing the puppy to a shallow, warm pond, with no current, is best for a puppy's first go at water introduction. At this time, just let the puppy investigate the area, let it be a dog. If the puppy wants to go into the water, that's great. If not, that's okay too – tomorrow is another day.

It is never wise to force, throw or push the puppy into the water. This strategy may create a negative experience which can cause a lasting memory that could prove difficult to reverse. Most puppies, however, go bonkers at this time and will usually tip-toe into the water without much encouragement. Though this may take a few trips to the pond, patience will prove to pay off. And, with the party started, a puppy will become a puppy in all its glory – wet, muddy, and exhausted.

With the introduction out of the way, and the puppy showing a keen interest in the water, it's now time for step two: getting the puppy chest-deep and possibly swimming. First, try to locate an area of the pond that has no lip, so as to make the entrance and exit easy and not intimidating. Most puppies will be cautious of a steep embankment. Secondly, the owner should put on their duck waders, walk out into the pond, and call the puppy to join in—there is no better lure money can buy.

Though most puppies will be a bit hesitant, they will come. If the puppy is still hesitant, some fun words of encouragement from the owner should help to do the trick. Keep in mind that the puppy is now entrusting their safety with their master. Go slow, and don't start this process in the deep-end of the pond, it will be counter-productive. Don't over-do it at this time. Stop when ahead, and enjoy the sight of a puppy learning how to swim—it won't be a Michael Phelps' perfect breast stroke, but it is sure fun to watch.

With more exposure, and confidence building, the puppy will become more brazen in the water. Owners should use these positive experiences to begin the next step in the development—competence in technique. Owners should continue with the wader drill, and now be walking into deeper water with their pup by their side. This companionship is an excellent place to encourage longer swims. The additional benefit is improved swimming technique and endurance. Remember, the puppy can do no wrong here; the goal here is to create confidence and independence in the water.

With the foundation built, it's time to start preparing for the water requirement of Natural Ability: the puppy must chase a bumper twice into a pond and demonstrate a willingness to swim—retrieving is not a requirement. If excitement begins to soften, mix it up with different types of decoys. Changing the location, and the "game," will help a puppy hold interest. Remember, three or four tosses are great, but twenty might be over-kill. Keep it fresh and fun.

With confidence high, the puppy now moves into the final stage. A puppy should now chase the bumper into the pond for the joy of swimming. An owner should start to see more independence, and notice longer search times and swims. If the puppy shows any signs of timidity, go back a step or two in the process and spend more time in the pond with the puppy, and go on warmer days, and, if absolutely necessary, throw wing-clipped birds. A puppy's development is not linear, and small steps often work best. Think building blocks.

With that being said, the NAVHDA NA water requirement is testament to a willing owner and a willing puppy. Decoys thrown are only the lure that helps lead a puppy to its independence. Testing is an important step which helps prepare a young dog to become a versatile hunter. By sticking to this, or a similar formula, one can expedite the learning time needed and perform well in the test. Enjoy the experience, the dedication, and the countless hours that will be spent. And for those that take on the assignment, best of luck and "hunt 'em up!"

Part 3: The Dog's Nose

The canine nose…truly one of nature's most amazing accomplishments. A dog's nose not only dominates her face, but her brain, as well. In fact, a dog relies on her sense of smell to interpret her world, in much the same way as people depend on their sight. Although this contrasting world view may be hard to imagine, know that your dog interprets as much information as you do. However, she does much of this by smelling an object or animal, not by staring at it. (Stanley Coren, Sarah Hodgson, Understanding A Dog's Sense of Smell).

This article is Part 3 of our series Understanding Bird Scent. In Part 1, we discussed how scent is created on a game bird. Part 2 was all about how the bird scent is diffused into the air. In Part 3, we'll discuss the receptor of all of this scent…the dog's nose. This entire article could be just about the anatomical structure of the canine nose, however, that might be boring. So, we'll discuss briefly the anatomy of the nose and then discuss how that anatomy works and how it compares to the human olfactory system.

When reviewing the anatomical structure of the canine nose, we encounter the nasal plane, vomeronasal organ, turbinates, sinuses, nasal mucosa and olfactory cells. For our purpose, we'll primarily discuss the turbinates. A microscopic view of this organ (turbinates) reveals a thick, spongy membrane that contains most of the scent-detecting cells, as well as the (olfactory) nerves that transport information to the (olfactory lobe of the) brain. In humans, the area containing these odor analyzers is about one square inch, or the size of a postage stamp. If you could unfold this area in a dog, on the other hand, it may be as large as 60 square inches, or just under the size of a piece of typing paper. (Stanley Coren, Sarah Hodgson, Understanding A Dog's Sense of Smell). Almost one eighth of the dog's brain and over 50% of the internal nose is committed to olfaction, whereas the human olfactory lobes are very much smaller. It is the brain that odors are recognized, interpreted, and filed for memory. (William G. Syrotuck, Scent and the Scenting Dog, 1972).

Here's more: The anatomy of a longer nose produces more scent receptors and greater scenting ability. For example, a human has five million scent receptors and a beagle (longer nose) has 225 million scent receptors. *…while we might notice if our coffee has had a teaspoon of sugar added to it, a dog could detect a teaspoon of sugar in a million gallons of water, or two Olympic-sized pools worth. Another dog scientist likened their ability to catching a whiff of one rotten apple in two million barrels. (*Alexandra Horowitz, Barnard College). If you make the analogy (human to dog), what you and I can see at a third of a mile, a dog could see more than 3,000 miles away and still see as well. (Peter Tyson, Dog's Dazzling Sense of Smell, NOVA ScienceNOW, 2012)

We've established the superiority of the canine nose over the human nose, now let's examine how the actual function of the nose differs between dog and man. When humans inhale, we breathe through the same airways (olfaction and respiration) within our nose. When dogs inhale, a fold of tissue just inside their nostril helps to separate these two functions (one for olfaction and one for respiration). (Peter Tyson, 2012). The air humans smell simply goes in and out with the air we breathe.

In dogs, about 12 percent of the inspired air, Craven's (Brent Craven, Pennsylvania State University) team found detours into a recessed area in the back of the nose that is dedicated to olfaction, while the rest of the incoming air sweeps past that nook and disappears down through the pharynx to the lungs. Within the recessed area, the odor-laden air filters through a labyrinth of scroll-like bony structures called turbinates. Olfactory receptors within the tissue that lines the turbinates, in turn, "recognize" these odor molecules by their shape and dispatch electrical signals to the brain for analyses.

When we (humans) exhale through our nose, we send the spent air out the way it came in, forcing out any incoming odors. When dogs exhale, the spent air exits through the slits in the sides of their noses. The manner in which the exhaled air swirls out actually helps usher new odors into the dog's nose. More importantly, it allows dogs to sniff more or less continuously. In a study done at the University of Oslo in Norway, a hunting dog holding its head high into the wind while in search of game sniffed in a continuous stream of air for up to 40 seconds, spanning at least 30 respiratory cycles. (Tyson, 2012).

Regarding the above: This ability is due to the Bernoulli effect, which results from lower pressure in the mouth cavity than in the nose during inhaling and causes an inward flow of air through the nose. This phenomenon only occurs while the dog is running with its head held high and does not occur while it is resting or searching for ground scent. This phenomenon explains why dogs can be running and breathing hard (panting) yet continuously scent game. (David K. Dahlgren, Use of Dogs in Wildlife Research and Management, Utah State University, 2012)

Let's summarize how the canine and human nose differ and why those differences make the canine nose so superior. The canine nose has far more scent-detecting cells, the canine nose separates inhaled air for olfaction and respiratory use which keeps olfaction air more pure. And, the percentage of the brain used for olfaction interpretation is much higher in a dog. The canine nose is the winner…hands down.

Throughout researching for this three part series, a common thread kept surfacing…a dog's health. A physically fit dog, both exercised religiously and fed properly for a canine athlete, will perform better. For a variety of health-related reasons, many bird dogs experience olfactory difficulties (Holloway 1961, Myers et al. 1988); having no sense of smell (anosmia) or a reduced sense of smell (hyposmia) is fairly common (L.J. Myers, Auburn University, pers. Commun.) Various sources list parasites, poor diets, fatigue and age as contributing factors to reduced scenting ability. Take good care of your dog and he'll reward you with superior work in the field.

In Part 1 of this series, we stated "…one day your dog is pointing birds at 30 yards and the next day he can't find a ham sandwich lying in front of his nose." I hope this three-part series has helped you now understand why this happens; and be more forgiving of your dog.

Help Wanted!

The 2017 NAVHDA Invitational is in need of volunteers to help with the test.

Whether you are going to observe or going to support a friend, now is the time to start planning your trip to the big event. When making your arrangements, be sure to plan on giving a day to help with the work. You will still be able to support friends and watch the test.

As you know, the organization is run by volunteers. This large event requires about 45 volunteers each and every day. If every person attending would help for just one day, we would have sufficient help for the test. Please consider to volunteer for a day.

When you volunteer, you will be given instructions on your position and plenty of guidance. Most of the assignments are not hard and do not require a lot of physical labor. It is fun and exciting!

By helping, you will learn more about the test, watch great dogs, see old friends, make new ones, and have a good time. Over the years I have made many friends at these events and can't wait to get there and see them again. I guarantee that you will enjoy the experience.

Again – please help.

PUPPY URBAN LEGENDS
The Facts Behind "The Truth"

One of the reasons that I love being a veterinarian is that what could easily start out as a boring day of puppy vaccines, vomiting dogs and ear infections usually provides enough material for a sitcom series. I see clients who truly believe that they don't need to vaccinate their dog for Parvo because "you know, a purebred dog can't get Parvo." I see others who feel that their dog doesn't need a distemper vaccine because their dog is really nice and the owner doesn't want its temperament changed. I swear, it's all true - you just can't make this stuff up. The purpose of this article is to discuss and debunk some of the most common urban legends about puppies and dogs.

Myth #1: Rubbing a puppy's nose in their mess teaches them not to eliminate indoors.
Fact: A puppy's short term memory lasts only a few seconds. If they have an accident in the house and you go back and try to punish them for it, they don't understand why you are punishing them. Rough handling only teaches the puppy to be frightened of you. Crate training is the most efficient and effective method of housebreaking a puppy. If your puppy tries to eliminate in the house, interrupt the behavior by clapping your hands or picking up the puppy and carry them outside. Use positive praise and rewards when they are eliminating outside. If they have an unwitnessed accident in the house, just clean it up and don't say or do anything.

Myth #2: You should always try to get your puppy before eight weeks of age.
Fact: Whenever possible, a puppy should remain with the dam until eight weeks of age. In eighteen states, it is illegal to sell a puppy under eight weeks of age. Why? Puppies have critical social development periods. At three to four weeks, puppies learn social interaction with litter-mates. They learn to play and they learn bite inhibition. They also are disciplined by the dam. As the puppies are weaned, mom teaches the puppies to accept her as leader of the pack and some basic behaviors. Puppies that are removed too early are often nervous, more prone to barking and biting and may be more difficult to train.

Myth #3: Don't take your puppy out or to puppy class until it has completed its initial puppy vaccination series at 16 weeks of age.
Fact: The most sensitive time for learning and socialization for a puppy is between four and 14 weeks of age. This is when puppies are best able to form relationships with others (people and animals) and if exposed to new environments, readily adapt. It is critical to expose your pet to many different environments during this time. But, be smart about exposure. Don't take your puppy to beaches, dog parks or other environments where unvaccinated dogs are likely to be. Find a clean facility with qualified instructors for puppy classes. Make sure that they require vaccination of all puppies enrolled in the program and that they do not allow ill puppies to enter.

Dr. Lisa Boyer is an emergency medicine veterinarian who practices both Western and integrative medicine in California. She breeds, trains, hunts and shows Wirehaired Pointing Griffons in northern California Please contact her at getagriffon@gmail.com. She welcomes suggestions for future articles.

Myth #4: Females should be allowed to have a litter before they are spayed (or they should be spayed before the first heat).
Fact: I could write an entire article about the benefit or disadvantages or early spay/neuter and breeding. A thorough discussion is beyond the scope of this article. There is a common, but misguided belief that breeding will develop "maternal instinct" and help calm the female dog. Breeding a female exposes her to many risks and health issues before, during and after breeding. Breeding should be done by knowledgeable people who understand the important decisions that are made with regard to genetic selection, pre-breeding health screening and care of the newborn litter. Reputable breeders invest a significant amount of time, effort and money into producing quality dogs.

Many veterinarians are trained to encourage clients to spay their female dogs before their first heat cycle. They also encourage male dogs to be neutered at a young age. One of the main reasons is that spaying before the first heat will decrease the incidence of mammary (breast) cancer in dogs. Neutering will decrease the risk of testicular cancer (no testicles = no cancer). Although true, it is not the whole story. The overall risk of mammary cancer is small compared to other cancers which may be increased in a spayed female. Thirty percent of all mammary cancers are malignant, but when caught early and removed, have a good prognosis. The risk of testicular cancer is small and when it occurs, the cure is a neuter. On the flip side, there are studies that show a five times greater risk of hemangiosarcoma (one of the three most common cancers in dogs) in spayed bitches and a 2.4 times greater risk in neutered males compared to intact males. The chance of developing bone cancer is also significantly increased in neutered dogs.

Of major importance in our hunting dogs is the change in orthopedic development that has been documented in studies with early spay/neuter. Dogs spayed before six months have been shown to grow taller than those spayed later. This change in orthopedic development may be responsible for the increased number of cranial cruciate ligament tears and hip dysplasia in athletic dogs spayed before six months of age.

So why spay or neuter your hunting dog? If your male dog is well behaved, doesn't roam (intact males are more commonly hit by cars) and is examined annually by a veterinarian, there may not be a good reason to neuter him. For females, it is more important to consider a spay. A female has a significant risk of developing a pyometra (an infection in the uterus) which is life threatening. Pyometra follows a heat cycle in which fertilization did not occur. Typically, within two to four months after the cycle, the female starts showing signs of the disease. Due to excessive progesterone (or a uterus that is oversensitive to progesterone), cysts form in the lining of the uterus. Through a series of events, the uterus fills with fluid. The body attempts to remove the fluid through the blood via the kidneys. Because the amount of fluid in the uterus is excessive, the kidneys are overloaded. The dog eventually becomes uremic (buildup of toxins in the blood) and dies from kidney failure. If caught in time, the cure is a spay, but instead of being a routine matter, dogs with pyometra are critically ill and surgery is difficult. Generally done on emergency, the pyometra surgery can run from $800-3,000, depending upon the condition of the dog and geographical location. My general recommendation is to monitor your intact females carefully post heat-cycle and once done breeding, schedule a spay as soon as possible.

Myth #5: My puppy eats its own feces because its diet is missing essential nutrients.
Fact: In some circumstances, coprophagia (eating feces) is a normal dog behavior. Bitches consume their puppies' feces to keep the nest clean. Puppies go through a stage where they put everything in their mouths, including feces. Most puppies grow out of this behavior. Some dogs persist in the habit for a wide variety of reasons, but not because their diet is lacking. There are solutions to this problem including the addition of Adolph's Meat Tenderizer to the food to make the stools less palatable. If this behavior is present in the adult dog, check with your veterinarian to rule out some medical conditions that can contribute to coprophagia.

Myth #6: My puppy's nose is warm, that means it's sick.
Fact: Definitely one for the old wives tale archives. Dogs' noses are usually moist and cool, but a dry warm nose does not mean he is sick. Nose temperature is not a reliable indicator of sickness or health. The best indication that a dog is ill is to take his temperature.

Myth #7: Garlic is a safe flea repellant for my puppy.
Fact: There are no documented studies to prove the effectiveness of garlic as a flea repellant. At high levels, garlic is actually toxic to dogs and causes anemia (destruction of red blood cells).

Myth #8: My puppy (dog) has poison oak.
Fact: There is not a single documented case of a puppy (dog) having a case of poison oak. They can however, pick up the oil on their skin and transmit the disease to you. If your dog has hunted through an area where poison oak is prevalent, put on gloves and give your dog two baths with Dawn dish soap or similar detergent. Allow sufficient drying time and the oil should be gone.

Myth #9: My puppy is small; it only needs 1/2 dose of a vaccine.
Fact: Vaccines are not dosed on a volume/weight basis. It is an "immunologic dose," the minimum amount that is designed to generate an immune system response. Most of the vaccines studies are done on smaller breed dogs. Reducing the vaccine dose means you can't rely on it for protection from disease.

Myth #10: In order to have a hard driving field dog, the dogs should display dominance or aggressive tendencies at home.
Fact: Dominance and aggression are relational issues between a puppy and other pets or people. Drive outside the field does not translate to desire to hunt. Although there are always differences in hierarchy in a dog pack, extreme dominance and aggression come from inadequate socialization and training. I regularly deal with dogs who are wonderful family members yet are bold hunters with high drive.

As I get ready to go back to work, I have to remember that wives tales, myths and urban legends will always exist. But at least they will be a continued source of humor. Like the client who came to me and insisted that her pet's serious illness was best treated with table salt. Or the client who asked if the Prozac I prescribed was for her dog or herself. Do your research, ask questions and don't always believe everything you read on the internet.

FULL CIRCLE FARE

Poule Korthal

Poule Korthal translates to "Griffon Gathering," the annual event sponsored by the Association Quebecoise du Griffon d'Arret a poil dur (Quebec Wirehaired Griffon Association) and hosted on the grounds of the Eastern Quebec NAVHDA Chapter, in La Durantaye, Quebec, Canada. A three-day affair that consisted of a training day on the first day, then a braced walking field trial and double mark that determines the Club Champion on the second day, followed by CKC Hunt Tests on the final day. Quite a weekend if you are interested in watching some great Griffs work.

However, it was not all work—every day there was a lunch break with thick wursts from the grill and a big pot of bubbling chili to satisfy hungry handlers. On the first night was a pot luck dinner. "Pot luck" does no justice to the contributions coming off the grill: wet herb rub hanger steak, dry aged strip steaks and spicy smoked sausages. But a tasty surprise came in the form of tenderly grilled chukar breasts with the simplest seasoning! The main event came the next night, after the Awards Ceremony, a Club hosted dinner prepared by Dominic Brisson. Afterward, desserts were set out: pies, cakes, tarts, cookies and treats of all kinds. The group was mostly asking, "What is Shoo Fly Pie?" Seems next time there might need to be a couple more pies to answer that question.

Easy Seasoned Partridge

Sophie Bergeron and Steeve Vallieres

- Chukar breasts, boned
- Olive oil
- Instant onion soup mix
- Black pepper

In a large resealable bag, add olive oil to chukar breasts, enough to coat. Sprinkle in soup mix and shake to distribute spices evenly, just enough to season. Shake or grind black pepper to taste. Let marinate at least 30 minutes. Grill on medium heat until just cooked through. Avoid overcooking. Top on your favorite summer salad.
